Quest Consultancy becomes a supporter of the British Safety Council

British Safety Council is delighted to welcome Quest Consultancy as a supporter in our 60th anniversary year.

We are a workplace charity dedicated to making workplaces around the world healthy and safe. We are a membership organisation that helps businesses of all sizes and sectors on a global scale to reduce health, safety, and environmental risks, make workplaces safer for everyone and improve long-term business performance.

Mike Robinson, Chief Executive of the British Safety Council said, "I'm pleased to welcome Quest Consultancy as a supporter of the British Safety Council.

As part of our 60th anniversary celebrations, we are inviting micro-businesses and charities around the world to become a supporter of the British Safety Council. This gives them access to a year's worth of expertise and resources designed specifically to help them manage their health, safety, and environmental risks in a sensible and proportionate way.

By sharing our knowledge and expertise, developed over 60 years, we aim to help British companies to identify and manage their health, safety and environmental risks."
